PROTECTS THE BICYCLES

Judge Kimball Severe About Glass Thrown on Streets.

WARNING TO AN OFFENDER

Be Regarded It as a Serious Offense, as It Menaces Tires, Hoods and Shoes. Would Be Burglars Nabbed and Given Workhouse Terms—A Musing Scene in the Police Court.

The driftwood that floats through the city at yuletide, and in the streets of the Washington police force, washed up on the police court beach this morning in the shape of thirty-seven offenders. The heart of Judge Kimball was melted with an undue portion of leniency, and the host of offenders, who had been waiting for their trial for thirty days, were taken into the arms of the workhouse.

A quartet of wandering Willie from Chicago, or some other strange city, were introduced in one party to his honor, and quicker than a flash, they were taken into the arms of the workhouse.

The personal of the party was as follows: Messrs. Mike Maury, Andy Smith, Jim Burke and Jake Conover. The officer in the case made a strong statement against the prisoners.

"About 1 o'clock this morning," said he, "I came along in the rear of Lyons' saloon, which fronts on the Avenue, and saw three of these men trying to break into the place. Maury was on the lookout for the others. My partner and myself stayed in the shadow of some neighboring steps. Just as the three were about to break the glass in the rear door Maury saw us and he gave the alarm."

"What have you to say?" asked the court as Smith advanced to the witness box.

"Well, judge, we just wanted a drink and were trying the back door to get in after it," said the man.

OFFICERS CAKE TOO QUICKLY.

"Well, you know you couldn't get anything to drink at that time of night. You were after something else, stand aside."

"Your honor, we did nothing," said Burke as he went to the stand.

"No, the officer came too quick," said Judge Kimball.

"Yes, I was on the watch," admitted Maury. "I simply didn't want to be seen entering the saloon. We were all dead thirsty, and simply wanted a little drink, but we wasn't to try to break in. I was never in trouble before."

"Conover, what have you to say?"

"Nothing, sir."

"Thirty days each," announced the court.

Pat Glenn has adopted the profession of begging. The officers found Glenn on Ninth street, holding every pedestrian up for the coin of the realm.

"I wanted to get a drink," he admitted.

"Begging in this city must be stopped," exclaimed Judge Kimball. "You shall serve thirty days."

"This boy threw glass in the street, and I arrested him," said Officer Ward of Georgetown. The prisoner was a fifteen-year-old colored boy named Robert Thomas.

"You know throwing glass in the street is a crime, judge, and I caught him at it."

"What about this boy?" asked Judge Kimball, as he leaned forward with increased interest.

"I dropped a bottle on the street and it broke, and I picked up some of the pieces and pitched them into the street," said Robert.

"Why, don't you know that is wrong?" said the court. "Think of it, glass in the street might cut a horse's hoof, or it might cut through a little boy's shoes, or it might puncture a bicycle tire."

"But, judge, I thought it better to throw the glass in the street than to have it on the pavement."

"Yes, but bicycle," said Judge Kimball. "I don't ride a wheel, but my son does, and I know how often he comes home with a hole in his tire."

IN THE BOY'S BEHALF.

"May I speak a word?"

The speaker, Mr. F. L. Graham, a reputable citizen of Georgetown, "I saw this," he continued, as he advanced and asked to be sworn. "The boy, I don't know him, was standing in front of Emerich's store, on Thirty-second street, when he dropped a bottle—a pint bottle. He picked up the neck and threw it into the street. This officer came up and placed him under arrest. I said to the policeman, 'You ought not to arrest him for that.' He replied, 'I'll take you, too, if you wish it.'"

"The boy then offered to pick up the glass, but the policeman would not let him. Mr. Dietz of Emerich's, and myself went to the station and put up collateral for him."

"Well, this is a very serious offense," said the court. "But I will let the boy off very easy. He is only $1. The arresting propensities of the officer were indicated."

Bad liquor got William Howard, a colored boy, in a carload of trouble last night. In the drama enacted in Judge Miller's court this morning how it all came about was told in detail.

After Howard had taken more than his memory would carry he entered Louis Stearns' saloon, on Fourteenth street, near T. There he passed the time of day with Alexander Gansburgh, the bartender. That is, Alexander thinks they both did that.

Who he was down in the police court this morning he had approximately sixteen yards of bandages around his head. In his hands he carried his shirt, collar, tie and handkerchief, all of which were drenched in the blue blood from his own veins.

BILL'S EXPLANATION.

"It was just this way, judge," said Bill. "I went in that saloon. I called for a drink. Mister Gansburgh said something to me. I did not know what he said. He reached around to me money drawer and pulled something out. I looked mighty like a pistol, judge. Den I looked a bear hot down on his head, and made den wounds be no sport."

"You'll go to jail for six months."

THEFT OF A PIANO.

Allegation Made Against Rosa Moody by Henry White.

Rosa Moody was put on trial before Justice Calk today for the alleged theft of a piano, the property of Henry White of 935 F street, and valued at $200.

It was bought on the installment plan and the defendant was said to have bargained for the piano, signed an agreement to pay $7 per month, and the instrument conveyed to a vacant house at No. 1716 Hayes court on a Saturday afternoon, and the same evening had it transferred to No. 2007 L street as a means of concealing it.

The allegation was made also that Rosa claimed to have been known by two names, and, as Rosa Moody, obtained the key to the vacant house and as Rosa Moody appeared at No. 935 F street as the owner of the piano.

JURY WILL INVESTIGATE

Coroner to Hold an Inquest Upon Willie Burnette This Afternoon.

Elliott, the Driver, Will Be Brought Up From Jail—Testimony of Eye-Witnesses.

Willie Burnette, the twelve-year-old son of Mrs. Sarah Burnette of No. 1063 Thirtieth street northwest, whose breast was crushed in last Monday by the pole of a wagon driven by William Elliott, died at 2:45 o'clock yesterday afternoon after three days of the most intense suffering.

Elliott is in the United States district jail, and at 4 o'clock this afternoon a coroner's jury will decide whether or not he was culpably negligent in the management of his team.

The last hours of the poor little fellow were spent in the most intense agony. The boy lay on a stretcher in the rear of the wagon of his mother, at No. 1063 Thirtieth street, and there Coroner Hammett viewed them at 10:30 o'clock this morning. Afterward he investigated the circumstances as the police and eye-witnesses gave them, and he decided to hold an inquest at the undertaking establishment of George W. Wise, corner of Twenty-ninth and M streets northwest, at 4 o'clock this afternoon.

Lieut. Swindell of the Seventh precinct was instructed to inspect a jury and have the witnesses in readiness for the investigation.

The accident occurred about 2 o'clock last Monday afternoon, and was so painful to the boy that he died a few minutes after the coroner's inquest. The driver, Elliott, the driver, that Prosecuting Attorney A. R. Mulhoney refused to accept bail in the police court, and had him remanded to jail to await the result of the boy's injuries.

Elliott will appear before the coroner's jury this afternoon, when the inquest will be held, and will probably be held to await the action of the grand jury on a charge of manslaughter.

RED BILL'S GANG.

Eppe's Assaults Given Terms in Jail and Workhouse.

The career of "Red Bill" and his gang, of Georgetown, has been a break at the scene of their conquests and exploits will know them no more for months to come.

"Red Bill" has another name. It is John Jackson, and he is in jail.

Six members of his gang were up before Judge Miller in police court today. They were James Bell, Jerry Jones, Richard Eppe, James Edwards, James H. Baker and Garfield Active. On Christmas day these men, their leader being behind the bars, knew not what else to do, so they fought.

Eppe was borne away to the Emergency Hospital with two stab wounds in the abdomen, and his ally, and fellow tribesman, Jerry Jones, had placed the cold steel through his vest. Edwards was carried off on a stretcher with a knife wound to the side. The officers have been busy since arresting the injured ones in the affray.

"Well, this beats anything I ever saw in my life," said Judge Miller, as he took up the half-score of informations charging the members of the gang with all degrees of crapshooting and affray. "If Solomon could unravel this skein, he is welcome to my seat."

With an admirable sangfroid and dexterity, his honor stated the points of the evidence, and then imposed sentences. Each and every one will stay in jail thirty days for helping in the affray. Jerry Jones was granted the additional sentence of eleven months and twenty-nine days for assault and six months for a similar offense.

"CRANK" MEYER IS HELD.

Jury Found Him Guilty of Assaulting a White-House Officer.

Edward Meyer, the thirty-one-year-old alleged "crank" who called at the Executive mansion last week to see Mr. Cleveland, was remanded to jail by Judge Miller today to await an investigation of his sanity and to hear from the authorities at Moyamensing prison and Northtown insane asylum, near Philadelphia.

The story of Meyer's appearance at the White House last evening and his arrest by Secret Service men was related in The Morning Times today. He claimed that he came to see the President concerning a pardon he thought he should have from the prison where he was incarcerated before he went to the asylum. When Martin ordered him away he assaulted him, and was the charge he had to face in police court today.

He demanded a jury trial, and though his sanity is gravely doubted, most of his actions are rational. The story he told on the stand was practically that told in The Times this morning. He insisted on saying he "had been informed" a pardon awaited him, and he would break away from the asylum and come here after it.

When questioned as to who his informants were, he said they were the hospital officials at the asylum. He admitted that he had been tied down there because of his violence, and said that he had previously been going under the fictitious name of Edward Morgan.

The jury returned a verdict of guilty on the charge of assault, and Judge Miller instructed the clerk to ascertain from the Pennsylvania authorities whether the man was wanted there for an unserved sentence.

FILED BILL IN EQUITY.

Jane Quinn and Kate Fogarty Disagree Over a Will.

Jane Quinn, a beneficiary, under the will of John Quinn, has filed a bill in equity against Kate Fogarty, to require the delivery of a certain deed of trust which defendant promised to execute as security for the reimbursement of the plaintiff for the amount of $1,200.

In case the defendant declines to execute the deed, the court is asked to appoint a trustee. The two principals to the suit were heirs under the Quinn will, and the property bequeathed consisted of real estate known as C street and 266 C street east, and No. 323 First street southeast, in this city.

GLASS WORKS TO CLOSE.

Stopping Production for the Purpose of Maintaining Higher Prices.

Anderson, Ind., Dec. 27.—The National Window Glass Trust, composed of the Eastern and Western combines, has called a special meeting at Chicago.

The purpose of the meeting is to get an agreement to close all plants on January 1 for either four or six weeks for the purpose of maintaining the 35 per cent increase in price. The indications are that every manufacturer will enter the agreement.

The shutdown will affect 2,000 laboring men. By agreement entered into some days ago all of the first or bottle works will close January 1 for a like purpose.
